ten houses in a council, any more than you can have ten leading spirits in a board of directors, all intent on running the business his own particular way.

The weakness of the present council is too many houses, and so the sessions are long on arguments and short on accomplishment.

The three commissioners elected will devote more time to serving the city and gaining experience, the first sixty days they are in office than an alderman does during his entire term, and when the work is divided up and each man is made responsible for his department, knowledge and intelligent experience will follow, and good service will result.

IRELAND AROUSED.

Dispatches from Ireland announce that the Orangemen are to be drilled and armed as though for war. It would appear that some Irish is not just what Ireland needs at present despite the cry of the ages that it must be free. The Emerald Isle has been a country without a flag for centuries but a tiny strip of territory that has given to the world at large many brave, fearless men. It has furnished fighting men to the armies of the world, and still the love for the bit of the "auld soil," the shamrock, and loyalty to the traditions of the past have caused even the third and fourth generations to long for the day when the harp of the Irish would be seen on the banner of their land. Now that Home Rule, so much sought after, is a possibility, it appears that it is not just what was desired, so we may expect other strife and warfare to disturb the peace and tranquillity of the troubled little island.

BACK TO BARBARISM.

History of the Latin republics of South America has been one round of opera bouffe wars, with lots of shooting and but little real fighting. Revolutions have been as common as ward primaries are in the United States but it remained for Ecuador to revert back to barbarism and shoot, hang and burn the eleven generals who started a revolution, failed and were convicted by an adverse court to imprisonment. It is time for some big "brother" to step in and teach these semi-barbarians what the word government really means.

CARNATION DAY.

Today is the birthday of the President William McKinley. Today all over the United States the tiny carnation, the favorite flower of the martyred president, is worn in remembrance. It is a simple tribute that is paid to the departed and one which in time will become more universal than it is at present.

Millwaukee plans to have a non-partisan campaign for mayor this spring with a view of bringing about the defeat of the socialists, Berlin, Germany, has just awakened to the fact the socialists have gained a decided victory there and the loss of Milwaukee would be offset by the gain of Berlin to the cause of the world over.

Polltellers throughout the county have already begun to host themselves and seek the approbation of the voters for various county offices. While it is early in the game it would look as though the coming summer would be a busy one for some people to say the least.

Taking it all in all Janesville has promise of an interesting primary next month after all. If half the men who talk of running for the office of commissioner really run, it will mean a good field to pick from.

The latest thing in the modern campaign is the adoption of the alderly campaign. Just whether the speaker will deliver his address from an alderly or not has not been decided definitely.

Woodrow Wilson and Colonel Harvey, with the aid of Col. Watterton, have done considerable work in putting the New Jersey man out of the running as a democratic presidential possibility.

Too much care can not be taken these cold days to look to the ventilation of the home and school room. There is nothing like fresh air and plenty of it to keep the children healthy and happy.

The weather man states that we will have a respite for a few days from the intense cold, but that by the latter part of the present week we will be glad to have our furnace fires going full blast again.

Germany is puzzled to know whether the recent socialist victories will result in the nation seeing red or whether it is merely a disease called color blindness.

Congress has started a lot of new investigations, but thus far no enterprising congressman has suggested really finding out how old Ann was?

A college graduate is said to be worth just six dollars a week. Of course this is not based on his own estimate of his worth.

It is a pity that China can not indulge in a revolution without having a famine come along and spoil it all.

Appeal of the Afflicted.

It was Walter's first visit to church, and he tried hard to remember all the varied instructions he had received, such as not whispering, keeping his head bowed during the prayer, etc.

But during the main portion of the service nature won a complete battle over memory and decorum. "Mother," shrieked the weary youngster, "when will it be time for me to struggle my neck? It's like to break if I don't do it soon!"

When a fellow who's traveled around breezes in And flops himself down in his best easy chair.

The fellow who's traveled around everywhere;

It is surely a pleasure to gossip with him.

He's welcome to us as a breath of fresh air.

He's been 'round the world and he's been 'round a lot.

He thinks and he speaks with a vigor and vim.

He is active in mind and he's active in limb.

He has brushed up against all the

And there's not a thought that's narrow in him.

He has seen all the best and he's seen

On all village scandal he places

LOSS OF POWER.

A large percentage of the energy that is in coal is lost. It goes up the chimney in smoke.

Much of the working power of ma-

The same is true of humans.

Man as designed is a perfect engine, but because of loss of energy or friction or transmission much of his power is wasted.

NEW NAME FOR STATE PARK IN GRANT COUNTY.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., Jan. 29.—Glenn park, at the mouth of the Wisconsin river, in Grant county, Wisconsin recently purchased by the state, is likely to be renamed Marquette park after an early explorer who is credited with the discovery of the mouth of the Wisconsin. In connection with this plan is mentioned a proposition among Catholics to establish a home for their aged poor in need of a retired life. It is said there is no suggestion to locate the home in this park but in comparative proximity. Marquette was a devout Catholic, and the two projects are in harmony from a sentimental point of view.

CHARGES PREFERRED AGAINST TWO GIRLS

Margaret Driver and Nellie Johnson, Both Under Eighteen, Held For Trial as Incorrigibles.

Nellie Johnson, sixteen years of age, and Margaret Driver who claims to be seventeen, were brought before Judge Rhoad in the municipal court this morning in answer to a charge of being found in the company of immoral persons and to state if there was any reason why they should not be committed to the state industrial school. The girls did not make an explicit plea to the charges, though refusing to admit them and the judge entered a plea of not guilty for them. Their trial was set for two o'clock tomorrow afternoon and $300 bail demanded of each, in default of which they will await their trial in the county jail.

The two girls were searched for and found by the police last evening, after the mother of the Driver girl made complaint that her daughter had not been home for four days. After being taken into custody by the police they admitted playing at the new yards, where a man had paid for their room and that later they went to the yards with two other men, one giving the name of Johns, and the other the name of O'Neill. They stayed at the Wells hotel, and were in the wine room of the European hotel Saturday afternoon.

The father of the Johnson girl was in court this morning. He declared he did not know of the manner in which his daughter had been conducting herself until her arrest last night. He did not want her sent to the industrial school but hoped she would be given an opportunity to mend her ways.

In response to the question of the judge as to whether she had been drinking, the Driver girl said she had drunk one glass of beer, and didn't think that hurt anyone.

JUSTICE RICHARDS IS SUDDENLY CALLED

Former Janesville Attorney and Prominent Member of Ottawa, Kansas Bar Found Dead in Bed.

Justice Robert A. Richards of Ottawa, Kansas, who was born at Postville, and who, as a young man did clerical work and studied law in the office of Attorney A. A. Jackson in this city, was found dead in bed at his home Tuesday, January 23. A copy of the Ottawa Morning Herald and a letter from Judge C. A. Smart of Franklin county brought the news of his death to Attorney Jackson. It was while in the office of Attorney Jackson that Mr. Richards met Mr. Smart who was reading law there at the time. Mr. Richards taught school in Rock county and was elected to the office of county superintendent, holding that office when the war broke out.

After the war Mr. Richards went to Springfield, Mass., where he engaged in mercantile business for a few years. He afterward returned to Janesville and resumed reading law, being admitted to the bar in 1881. In 1884 he removed to Ottawa, Kansas, where he has made his home since. For six years he held the office of city attorney there and was justice of the peace for nearly ten years.

Mr. Richards would have been seventy-six years old next August. He was never married. The cause of his death is thought to have been heart disease.

The funeral was held at Ottawa, January 25, from the Congregational church.

HEART AND HOME TALKS BY BARBARA BOYD

The Question of Friendship Between Men and Women.

SINCE collectively, we are in many ways getting a broader outlook on life, since we are becoming more and more enlightened on many subjects, why cannot we, as a whole, get a better view of the question of friendship between men and women?

We have advanced on the question of woman's economic independence, of suffrage, of labor. We are even beginning to put war in the category where it belongs, as not really an expression of patriotism, but a survival of the brute instincts. We are far ahead in scores of ways of what we were one hundred years ago. But when it comes to the question of the relations of men and women, we are still in the Dark Ages.

Let a married man or woman show any signs of friendship for a member of the other sex, either married or single, and immediately the majority of us, lift the eyebrows, shrug the shoulders, and the tongue of gossip begins to wag. Many of us seem to think that it is impossible for a married man to enjoy the companionship of a married or single woman in a purely friendly fashion; or that a married woman can find pleasure in association with a man, unless some emotion deeper than friendship is at the root of it.

This is not theory. Almost every one knows in his circle of acquaintances some such cases, and of the gossip that followed.

A prominent business man and philanthropist, known the country over for his high standing in financial circles, as well as for his philanthropic work, has been gossiped about interminably, in fact, almost slandered, because of his friendship for a young girl. The girl is rather exceptional mentally, and this man finds pleasure in her companionship. There is nothing but a sincere friendship between them. Yet because he is married, the world seems to think such friendship should not be.

A prominent clergyman has been criticized bitterly by friends, and members of his congregation, because of what seems favors he has showered upon a trained nurse, who has been a member of his household for several years taking care of an invalid daughter. He looks upon this nurse almost as one of his family, and has a real regard for her. But despite his hitherto irreproachable character, many look upon his attitude toward her as wrong, and seem to think he can have no feeling for her but what is a reflection upon his wife.

The case of Madame Curie and her fellow-worker is different; though at this distance and with the many conflicting reports, it is difficult to tell just how matters stand. But abstractly, it is not possible for a woman of her liberal education and scientific attainments to find pleasure in the friendship of a man working in the same field of research, without there being anything in the feeling to justify a wife's jealousy? Surely, it is possible. It is only the narrow, suspicious, and really unworthy spirit who misconstrues such a friendship.

Can we not, as women, get beyond this narrow spirit? Can we not refrain from judging and gossiping and criticizing, when we see such an intimacy between a man and a woman? Can we not be big enough to believe that a pure friendship, a simple pleasure in each other's society, is possible, without any deeper emotion being stirred, even though one or the other may be married?

This is not meant to condone unfaithfulness, or to encourage unfaithfulness, to marriage vows. Nor is it meant to infer that there is no such thing; for we all know that there is only too much of the coveting of his neighbor's wife. But it is meant that we should not immediately put all friendship between a man and a woman into this class, nor think that all friendships between married men and women are of this kind and that there is no other.

Let us refrain from criticizing and judging. Let us be big enough to admit that such friendships are possible. Let us advance in this matter, as we have in many others, into a larger and kinder consideration of each other.

Thought for Today BY MRS. ROBERT M. LAVOLLETTE

STANDARDIZATION.

AT THE recent meetings here in Washington of the national societies interested in economic and social problems, Professor Childs of Columbia University spoke on "The Quality of Civilization." He said one of the strongest forces now at work in the making of our American civilization out of the heterogeneous elements contributed by immigration to our land was "The Standardization of Consumption." The kind of clothes we wear, the sort of food we eat, the way we furnish our houses—our whole way of living, is limited by our foreign-born population. Racial and national differences soon disappear, and by the second generation American standards are well established.

We women should remember we are primarily responsible in the making of our civilization. A true patriotism demands that we should consider whether the standards we set will improve the quality of civilization or detract from it. The fashions we set, the clothes we wear, the food we buy, are making their impression on our nation's life. In view of their far-reaching influence we should consider more carefully than we do at present the intrinsic value of materials, their durability, their artistic quality, their adaptation to real needs, and in providing our table we should consider not only the pleasure of taste but the nutritive value of food.

We should also inquire whether those peoples from foreign lands, with their older civilization, who come to make their home among us, do not bring with them some standards that it would be well for them to maintain and for us to adopt rather than displace—their more uniform dress, their simpler diet, beautiful handiwork, their closer economy. Instead of the assumption of superiority on our part and imitation of theirs, there should be greater mutual respect and teachability.

She is going out in the interest of child welfare, and before she returns, she will have visited practically all of the world.

She has been active all of her life in such work as would help or tend toward the uplift of American children, and in this saving the opportunity of studying at first hand conditions over the world she accomplished one of her greatest desires, and it is her express hope that after she returns to New York she will be able to have gathered many new ideas which will be of help in this country.

The KITCHEN CABINET

BEHIND the small and shiny door is a great and vast world of knowledge.

Everyone ought to be an enthusiast in his calling.

CAKE MAKING.

The making of cakes as well as the making of bread has passed through a period of evolution. For the busy housewife who finds it necessary to do the bulk of the work and in most cases all of the household work, besides sewing, it seems expedient that she use the utmost economy of effort in accomplishing her duties. The process of cake making has always been one of much time. During recent years of experiment in our cooking school laboratories, we find that good cake, as good as the old method, may be made with much less expense of time, and materials. When butter is 40 cents a pound it is some comfort to know by actual test that we may have cake on our tables without mortgaging the farm. Except when used warm, cakes that are shortened with lard, snowdrift or other pure and odorless fats cannot be told from those made with butter. It is always necessary to remember that the required amount of salt should be used, otherwise the taste of the cake will be flat, stale and unprofitable.

The amount of shortening to be used depends upon the cake, a half to three-quarters of a cup is sufficient. When using butter the old method was first to give the butter a good creaming until soft and waxy then add the sugar gradually, a process exceedingly slow. Now the up-to-date cook when she is extravagant enough to use butter warms it by gentle heat until it is melted, then adds powdered sugar which costs just a cent more for a cake, and she has a cake which can be compared favorably with any creamed butter cake. The fact that the butter can be melted and the sugar added saves much time in the making.

A portion of cake in a serving is equal to a glass and a half of milk or three eggs in food value, so that cake is not entirely a food accessory, but a real food in the menu.

In melting butter for cake care should be taken that it does not get too hot as butter fat decomposes when heated and is thus less digestible.

THE BREAD QUESTION.

No question in diet, except the meat question, has been so vigorously debated as that of the relative values of white and brown or entire wheat bread. Some maintain that the fine white flour contains a larger percentage of nutriment than the entire wheat flour, quoting the analysis of the government chemist to prove it. They also insist that the coarse outer shell of the wheat is extremely irritating to the delicate lining of the intestinal canal, one physician, who writes extensively on diet, going so far as to say that it is better to use the white bread and take a "judicious pill" occasionally.

It is urged by those who favor white bread that tests show a larger percentage of waste in the excreta from whole wheat bread; in other words, the fine white bread is more completely assimilated. This is the truth, but not the whole truth. The whole wheat flour contains everything that the fine white flour contains, and some very valuable elements not in the white flour.

It is true that the elements of food of which the largest percentages are needed in the daily ration are carbon and nitrogen, and that white bread contains these in larger percentage, because excluding some valuable elements of nutrition found in the whole wheat. But the exclusion of these elements breaks the staff of life.

The Evening Chit-Chat BY RUTH CAMERON

"It ain't no use to grumble and complain,
It's just as cheap and easy to rejoice;
When God sorts out the weather and sends rain,
Why tahn's my choice."

—James Whitcomb Riley.

THEIR passed our house the other day a man in a cart leading two horses.

One of these horses was hanging back with all his might and man, tugging at the bit and altogether having a most terrible time. And, of course, the harder he pulled the worse it hurt him, and every now and then the man in the cart had to yank the rope to get him along at all.

The other horse was being hustled along at the same pace, of course, but he never lagged at all, and consequently his bit wasn't pulled, and he looked quite comfortable and cheerful. You, horses can look cheerful, dejected, or cross. If you don't believe they have expression, it's just because you never really looked at them.

I suppose you could see this paragraph coming before you reached it, but, really, wasn't there a perfect analogy in that little scene to the way human folks act? Fate and circumstances lead us all along at a certain pace. We've got to go where we're led whether we like it or not. Fighting at the bit doesn't help a mite. It simply makes us uncomfortable and reminds us that we're being led. Whereas, we might trot along like the cheerful horse and pretend we were going just where we wanted to anyway.

And yet all the livelong time some folks drag at the bit, hurt themselves and make themselves just as uncomfortable as they know how.

It seems to me that the very biggest lesson of life is this—that happiness does not lie in passions, position, or power, or the lack of it in the lack of these things, but happiness is just a state of mind.

"The pleasure of gratified desires of any kind—pass just as the 'show upon the desert's dusty face, lighting a little hour or two, is gone.' But the happiness of a contented mind, of a mind determined to be contented, never passes.

What's the use of dragging at the bit and making the journey one perpetual protest? Isn't it much better to be like the horse that knows he has to be led and just trots along cheerfully?

Really, I can't see how there can be two opinions about that.

CAN'T LIVE ON $100.00 PER MONTH.
New York City.—Mrs. Albert G. Wheeler, Jr., comic opera star and wife of a prominent New York banker, is the defendant in a suit brought by her husband asking that her alimony be cut from $500 a month to $100 a month.

Mrs. Wheeler is a daughter of Axel B. Carlstedt, formerly a director of

She declares Mr. Wheeler accustomed her to a style of living that cost about $50,000 a year, that he spends $100 a day, and consequently she cannot live on $100 a month.

UP-TO-DATE HOUSEKEEPING.

Do White Sewing Now—Shop Garments—About Bed Linen.

By Alice E. Whitaker.

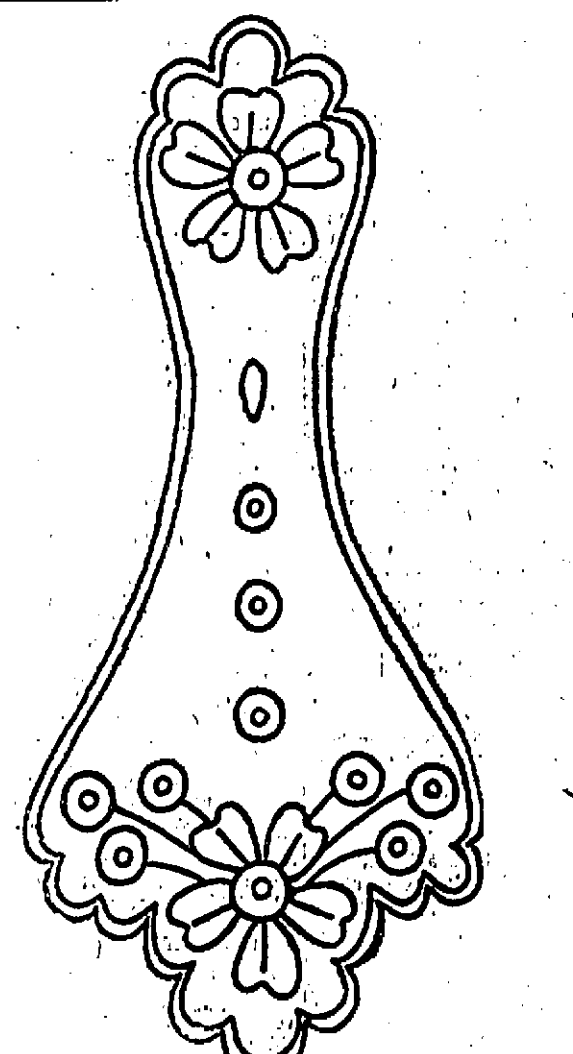

Some of the nicest sheets and pillowcases contribute to have deep hem-stitched hems but more are finished with machine made scallop. As usual large initials or monograms are placed above the hems. Although it is not exactly a fashion many housekeepers are edging the hem of pillowcases with a narrow lace which gives a dresy look at small expense for often suitable lace is found at five cents a yard.

It does not pay to put embroidery on a cheap pillowcase and those costing seventy five cents a pair are as low priced as it will pay to spend time on. For two dollars the housewife may buy a pair of linen pillowcases with an embroidered vine across one end and if she likes an initial may be put above the embroidery. These pillowcases are handy for what are sometimes called day pillows and they take the place of the old time pillow sham which is one of the most unsatisfactory makeshifts ever invented.

It is a pretty fashion for a young girl to have her own bed furnishings, towels and other linens used about the room and to mark them with her initials. This teaches housewifely pride in her belongings and this individual ownership may well extend to other things about the house. One great cause of unrest in the grown up daughter who stays at home is that she has no ownership in anything and she often envies her married sister who, despite her great cares, enjoys being mistress of her home and its furnishings.

CURIOUS BITS OF HISTORY

WHEN BENEDICT ARNOLD WAS LOYAL.

By A. W. MACY.

In the early days of the Revolutionary war one of Washington's most trusted generals laid before him a plan to invade Canada by way of the Maine wilderness and capture Quebec by surprise. Washington approved, the project was undertaken, and came astonishingly near succeeding. The little army was composed of about 650 poorly clad men, with barely 400 good muskets among them, and only five rounds of ammunition to each man. After a march of almost incredible hardships through 200 miles of what is to this day a mountainous wilderness, the little army climbed the cliffs and boldly demanded the surrender of the city. But it was in no condition to enforce its demand, for the place was strongly fortified and garrisoned by 1,000 men. So the little band withdrew up the river a few miles, where it encountered a detachment of British soldiers. A sharp fight ensued, during which the leader of the Americans was badly wounded. Had he been killed then and there his name would have gone down in history as that of a patriot and hero. But he recovered, and his name is now the synonym for treason in this country—Benedict Arnold. Had his bold expedition succeeded, it probably would have united Canada to the thirteen colonies, and changed the whole course of the war.

Date Muffins

A New Way of Using Dates
By Mrs. Janet McKenzie Hill, Editor of the Boston Cooking School Magazine
The value of dates as a food is hardly appreciated. They are wholesome, nutritious, and when used in K C Date Muffins, make a recipe that is appreciated by the entire family.

K C Date Muffins

One-third cup butter, 1/2 cup sugar, 1 egg, 1/2 cup milk, 2 cups flour, 3 level teaspoonsful K C Baking Powder, 1/4 teaspoonful salt, scant 1/2 pound dates.

Cream the butter, add the sugar and the egg, beaten light. Sift together three times the flour, baking powder and salt; add these to the first mixture, alternately with the milk; beat thoroughly and add the dates, stoned and cut in pieces. To bake, have a slow oven until the muffins double in bulk, then increase heat to bake and brown quickly. Muffins baked this way will be light, appetizing and more easily digested.

This is only one of the many appetizing recipes found in the K C Cook's Book. The wonderful K C Cook's Book is substantially bound and printed in fine colors, contains ninety tested and easily made recipes by Mrs. Janet McKenzie Hill, of the world-famous Boston Cooking School Magazine.

You can secure a copy FREE by sending the colored certificate packed in 25-cent cans of K C Baking Powder to the J. C. Davis Co., Chicago.

NEED WARM WEATHER FOR HANDLING CROP

Receiving and Warehouse Handling of 1911 Tobacco Constitutes Present Activity.

The absorbing interest in local tobacco markets for some time to come is likely to be the receiving and warehouse handling of the tobacco crop contracted for months ago says the Edgerton Reporter. This is now being taken and settled for as fast as the facilities for packing will warrant. Weather conditions are yet somewhat against crowding this work, although most of the warehouses are running with full force and will be kept busy until the spring months. We hear of no effort to purchase the unsold fraction of the crop at present.

Business in old leaf is still confined to moderate sized transactions to meet pressing needs of manufacturers, and no news of importance in this line has developed.

There is a steady line of deliveries coming to this market each day and much receiving is done at outside points by the larger operators.

The shipments out of storage reach 1677 cases and 7 carloads of bundles for the week to all points. Since last report 32 carloads have been received for warehouse handling.

LEARN TO BE HAPPY IS PASTOR'S ADVICE

DR. DAVID BEATON IN SERMON
LAST NIGHT URGES LIFE OF JOY AND GLADNESS.

ESSENTIALS OUTLINED

Good Health, Means of Self-Expression, Interest in Work, Service, and Are Aids to Happiness.

"Learn to be happy" was the message brought by Dr. David Beaton in his sermon at the Union service held in the Methodist church last evening. It was not a theological or a spiritual happiness of which the speaker talked, but actual joy and gladness in life as it is lived day by day. The address was refreshing in its liberality and breadth of view, and tended to reconcile one's every-day experience to the religious life.

The text for the address was taken from Psalm 118:24: "Thou wilt show me the path of life: in Thy willance is fullness of joy: at Thy right hand there are pleasures for evermore."

The sermon is given in part: "It was formerly a custom to ask every person in a church congregation the question, 'Do you want to be saved?' But this practice has long since gone out, for if it should be put today we would have as many answers as there are people. We are more sophisticated about these things nowadays and we attach various meanings to different ideas.

"People are ever searching after new ideas. They want the old world and a new meaning. They want the old ideas vitalized so that men and women can understand what we are talking about. It might be a question of doubt whether we all wanted to be saved, but there isn't any normal person who does not want to be happy. All want to live a happy, joyous life, and there is nothing so pathetic as people who are hanging after a little fun."

Dr. Beaton called to mind the woman who became dissatisfied with her lot, and, in an effort to see the world, left home with thirty-five dollars and went to Chicago. She lived in the La Salle hotel, in the best apartment, tipped the servants, and had a glorious time; but when she had run up a bill of over eighty dollars, she had nothing with which to pay, and ended in the police court.

"Religion is for the purpose of making people happy; to bring the gladness and joy of God to the human heart—and when I say that I don't mean anything theological or spiritual or supernatural, but such joy as the best experiences of the joyousness of the love of God in the presence of his beloved, as the strong man feels in his power to accomplish the task which is put before him, as the statesman and the patriot know in the doing of their country's work.

"At this right hand there are pleasures for evermore, and when the pessimist said that he didn't mean anything religious. People want to get rid of the idea that when they are hearing a sermon they are hearing something different. It is the purpose of the preacher, and of religion, to show people how they may be happy."

"Sometimes the trouble with the people is a starved intellect. There are a great many young men and women who are plunging into religion because they have no imagination. And so it is the purpose of our education to tell of the deeds of the heroes, the prophets, the statesmen and the generals, in order to awaken the imaginations of the young and when temptation comes they will be able to withstand it.

"In addition to a good intellect, however, it is essential to have a healthy physical body, and so we are going about to secure this in our schools; our boys and girls are given physical training because morally they very near to a good physical condition.

"The elements of joy are always present in the young life because it is perfectly simple and natural that the young should be happy. And if any young life is deprived of joy it is a crime, either of the parents or of society. The first sign of a criminal in society is that the children are born corrupted in blood. What do we mean by temptation and clouds? Do we mean something in the clouds? On the contrary, they are matters very near to our physical well-being.

"Health and innocence are the basis of joy, but there is another element which comes nearer to being a religious basis. People are sick in the winter time because they don't get enough fresh air. And people are morbid, wear a perpetual 'grouch' because they have no means of expressing themselves. Happy is the young man or woman who can find an expression in music, and there are thousands of people who are saved because they have an avocation which occupies their lives. The young man who, like to read is not found in the saloon in the evenings; such people as these are happy because they are self-expressed. Happiness is found in self-expression, in believing why, in conviction, in loving, which is the strongest expression of one's nature, in working."

"Tomorrow, when you get up, will you be happy to go to your work? If you are not, there is something wrong for the day's labor should give you an opportunity for self-expression. Happiness is found in serving others, not for money or any kind of a reward, but for the sheer love of helping one another. That's why we say that the Gospel and Christianity brings happiness. It helps us to live, believe, and think nobler things; it helps us to serve our fellowmen with joy and not with sorrow, and thus to gain a crown of life which fades not away."

CLAIMS SHE WAS THE VICTIM OF GREEKS?

Beloit Police Puzzled by Taking of Woman, Claiming Janesville as Her Home.

According to the Beloit papers, a woman, giving the name of Nellie Dunn, made startling charges against a pair of Beloit Greeks. Chief Applegate is of the opinion that "Dunn" is an alias given by the Janesville woman in question, as no one of that name is known here. According to the Daily News of Beloit, the following is her story:

"Nellie Dunn of Janesville was locked up in the local battle last night by the police. Nellie tells a startling story of how she was lured to a house on the corner of Pleasant street and College avenue last New Year's eve and kept prisoner there until New Year's morning by two of the Greek romancers.

"The house in question has been under suspicion for some time. The police have raided it once or twice, but could find no evidence of disorderly conduct. They say the roomers have been having women from Janesville there at different intervals but this is the first time they have been able to 'land them' they state.

"The Dunn woman says she was 'lured' to the place the first time by a man named Mike Vaskas. While there, one of the young men, she says, took her watch to fix it. She has been back several times to get her watch and New Year's eve the men told her it was in a room upstairs, she claims. When she got upstairs, she alleges that they held her prisoner and did not release her until morning.

"Yesterday she came down for her watch again. When they refused to give it to her she went to the police station and made her story and they locked her up. They raided the house and picked up Mike Vaskas, cousin of the man alleged to have lured Nellie to the place in November and a young man named Paulus, whom the woman identified as one of the men who held prisoner New Year's eve. Paulus claims that he came from Buffalo five days ago.

"Nellie says the watch was worth about $5 when it was taken and the chain to which it was attached was worth about $3.

"John Paulus was, late this afternoon, fined $25 and costs in municipal court on a statutory charge. Vaskas and the Dunn woman were released."

CASH TAX SYSTEM IN MANY COUNTIES

Rock and Many Other Counties in State Adopt Cash System of Paying Highway Taxes.

One of the progressive measures of the 1911 legislature was the passage of a law, Chapter 559, laws of 1911, whereby county boards are enabled by a majority vote of all the members to adopt the cash system of paying the highway taxes in all the towns of the county.

About one half of the counties of the state took advantage of this measure at the recent county board meetings, among which are, Ashland, Barron, Buffalo, Chippewa, Columbia, Dane, Douglas, Eau Claire, Florence, Grant, Green, Green Lake, Juneau, Kenosha, Lafayette, Lincoln, Marinette, Pierce, Portage, Price, Vernon, Rock, Richland, Waupesa, Racine, Trempealeau, Watworth, Waukesha, Waushara and Winnebago. The old system of working out the road tax has proved inefficient and not productive of the best results. Men who work out their road taxes do so, usually, without much feeling of responsibility. They arrive late, rest frequently, and leave early. The general impression prevails that the labor system of road tax has been far from a success in most communities.

Within the last few years, most of the states have abandoned this practice, and the few states that remain under the old system are fast abolishing it, and Wisconsin will soon be among that number. The reason some counties in the state did not adopt the cash system at the recent county board meetings was either through ignorance of the passage of the law which makes a cash tax possible, or because the representatives of the towns did not feel that their constituents were quite ready to adopt the new system. It is felt, however, that next fall practically all counties will vote a cash tax.

The cash system will not take away any of the power of the supervisors or road superintendents of road districts, rather will it increase their power. The road superintendent can hire his men when he needs them, and not have to wait for the convenience of men who think their time too valuable to neglect their private interests for the public welfare, and instead of inefficient services performed by men who devote to the road superintendent the time of their labor, he can hire men at his own price and demand an efficient day's work for a day's wages. In other words, it will make possible a dollar's worth of work for every dollar expended. Although this law is separate from the new state aid law, Chapter 337, laws of 1911, yet it is, in effect, second with that measure, and will assist greatly in producing a better and more equitable system of road-building in the state.

SMALL COURTESIES ARE LOST

These Things That Make Life Really Worth While Seem to Be Forgotten.

Small courtesies of life seem to be entirely lost in the rush for big things. This leaving off of the little things that go to make living worth while is a well-known and recognized fact to women who crave those gracious attentions so easy in the giving when the thought is right.

Many men no longer consider it necessary to rise when a lady enters the room. If they offer a chair, it is seldom done with the old-time alacrity, and a few trips on a city car will be sufficient to convince the veriest skeptic of the truth of courtesy's decadence.

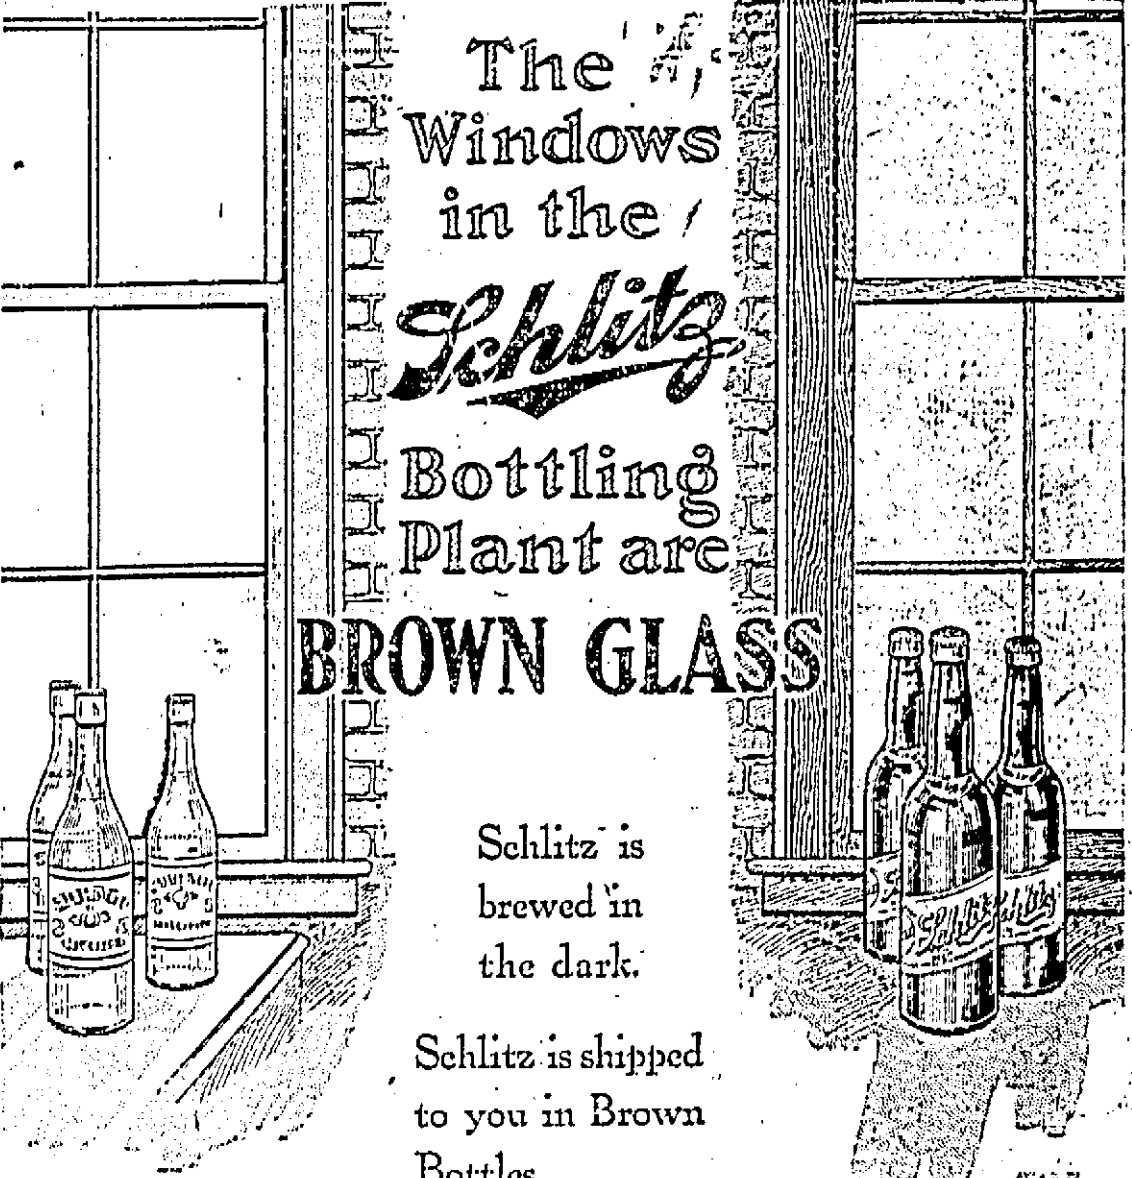

He it said in favor of man, continually on the rack regarding these omissions, that he is by no means the greatest offender. Women who entertain will tell you of scores of invitations to which they have never even received the courtesy of an acknowledgment. "It is V. P." at the end of a card or note means nothing to women too thoughtless or too ill-bred to take five minutes for a reply. Such treatment of a social courtesy is an offense of a kind that causes the offender's name to be struck from the social list of the hostess.

The small courtesies of woman to woman are fully as important as those from man to woman, or woman to man.

You're bilious, you have a throbbing sensation in your head, a bad taste in your mouth, your eyes burn, your skin is yellow, with dark rings under your eyes; your lips are unclean. No wonder you feel ugly, mean and ill tempered. Your system is full of bile not properly passed off, and what you need is a cleansing up inside. Don't continue being a bilious nuisance to yourself and those who love you, and don't resort to harsh physics that irritate and injure. Remember that every disorder of the stomach, liver and intestines can be quickly cured by morning with gentle, thorough Cascarets—they work while you sleep. A 10-cent box from your druggist will keep you and the entire family feeling good for months. Children love to take Cascarets, because they taste good and never gripe or sicken.

"I thought so!" said Raoul, compressing his lips. "But then why, when you saw me in your room, at your feet, reminding you that I had rescued your scarf from the sea, why did you answer me though you did not know me and also why did you laugh?"

The tone of those questions was so rough that Christine stared at Raoul without replying. The young man himself was agitated at the sudden quarrel which he had dared to raise at the very moment when he had resolved to speak words of gentleness, love and submission to Christine. A husband, a lover with all rights, would talk no differently to a wife, a mistress who had offended him. But he had gone too far and saw no other way out of the ridiculous position than to behave odiously.

"You don't answer!" he said angrily and unhappily. "Well, I will answer for you. It was because there was some one in the room who was in your way, Christine, some one that you did not wish to know that you could be interested in any one else!"

"If any one was in my way, my friend," Christine broke in coldly, "if any one was in my way, that evening, it was yourself, since I told you to leave the room!"

"Yes, so that you might remain with the other!"

"What are you saying, monsieur?" asked the girl excitedly. "And to what other do you refer?"

"To the man to whom you said, 'I sing only for you!' . . . tonight I gave you my soul and I am dead!"

Christine seized Raoul's arm and clutched it with a strength which no one would have suspected in so frail a creature.

"Then you were listening behind the door?"

"Yes, because I love you . . . And I heard everything. . . ."

"You heard what?"

"And the young girl, becoming strangely calm, released Raoul's arm. 'He said to you, 'Christine, you must love me!''"

"At these words, a deathly pallor spread over Christine's face, dark rings formed round her eyes, she staggered and seemed on the point of swooning. Raoul darted forward, with arms outstretched, but Christine had overcome her passing faintness and said, in a low voice:

"Go on! Go on! Tell me all you heard!"

"At an utter loss to understand, Raoul answered: 'I heard him reply, when you said you had given him your soul, 'Your soul is a beautiful thing, child, and I thank you. No emperor ever received so fair a gift. The angels wept tonight.'"

Christine carried her hand to her heart, a prey to indescribable emotion. Her eyes stared before her like a madwoman's. Raoul was terror-stricken. But suddenly Christine's eyes moistened and two great tears trickled, like two pearls, down her ivory cheeks.

"Christine!"

"Raoul!"

The young man tried to take her in his arms, but she escaped and fled in great disorder.

"While Christine remained locked in her room, Raoul was at his wit's end and what to do. He refused to breakfast. He was terribly concerned and bitterly grieved to see the hours, which he had hoped to find so sweet, slip past without the presence of the young Swedish girl. Why did she not come to room with him through the country where they had so many meetings in common? He heard that she had had a mass said, that morning, for the repose of her father's soul and spent a long time praying in the little church, and on the father's tomb.

Then, as she seemed to have nothing more to do at Perros and, in fact, was doing nothing there, why did she not go back to Paris at once?"

Raoul walked away, dejectedly, to the graveyard in which the church stood and was indeed alone among the tombs, reading the inscriptions; but, when he turned behind the altar, he was suddenly struck by the dazzling note of the flowers that struggled over the white ground. They were marvelous red roses that had blossomed in the morning, in the snow, giving a glimpse of life among the dead, for death was all around him. It also, like the flowers, leaped from the ground, which had hung back a number of its corpses. Skeletons and skulls by the hundred were heaped against the wall of the church, held in position by a wire that left the whole gruesome stack visible. Dead men's bones, arranged in rows, like bricks, to form the first course upon which the walls of the church had been built. The door of the sacristy opened in the middle of that bony structure, as is often seen in old Breton churches.

Raoul said a prayer for Dana and then, painfully impressed by all these eternal smiles on the mouths of skulls, he climbed the slope and sat down on the edge of the heath overlooking the sea. The wind fell with the evening. Raoul was surrounded by icy darkness, but he did not feel the cold. It was here, he remembered, that he used to come with little Christine to see the Korrigans dance at the rising of the moon. He had never seen any,

"What are you laughing at? You think you heard a man's voice, I suppose?"

"Well! . . . replied the young man, whose ideas began to grow confused in the face of Christine's determined attitude.

"It's you, Raoul, who say that? You, an old playfellow of my own! A friend of my father's! But you have changed since those days. What are you thinking of? I am an honest girl, M. le Vicomte de Chagny, and I don't lock myself up in my dressing-room with men's voices. If you had opened the door, you would have seen that there was nobody in the room!"

"That's true! I did open the door, when you were gone, and I found no one in the room."

"So you see! . . . Well?"

The viscount summoned up all his courage.

"Well, Christine, I think that somebody is making game of you."

She gave a cry and ran away. He ran after her, but, in a tone of fierce anger, she called out: "Leave me! Leave me!" And she disappeared.

Raoul returned to the inn feeling very weary, very low-spirited and very sad. He was told that Christine had gone to her bedroom saying that she would not be down to dinner. Raoul dined alone, in a very gloomy mood. Then he went to his room and tried to read, went to bed and tried to sleep. There was no sound in the next room.

The hours passed slowly. It was about half-past eleven when he distinctly heard some one moving, with a light, stealthy step, in the room next to his. Then Christine had not gone to bed! Without troubling for a reason, Raoul dressed, taking care not to make a sound, and waited. Waited for what? How could he tell? But his heart thumped in his chest when he heard Christine's door turn slowly on its hinges. Where could she be going, at this hour, when every one was fast asleep at Perros? Softly opening the door, he saw Christine's white form in the moonlight, slipping along the passage. She went down the stairs and he leaned over the balustrade above her. Suddenly he heard two voices in rapid conversation. He caught one sentence: "Don't lose the key."

It was the landlady's voice. The door facing the sea was opened and locked again. Then all was still.

Raoul ran back to his room and threw back the window. Christine's white form stood on the deserted quay.

The first floor of the Setting Sun was at no great height and a tree growing against the wall held out its branches to Raoul's impatient arms and enabled him to climb down unknown to the landlady. Her annoyance, therefore, was all the greater when, the next morning, the young man was brought back to her half frozen, more dead than alive, and when she learned that he had been found stretched at full length on the steps of the high altar of the little church. She ran at once to tell Christine, who hurried down and, with the help of the landlady, did her best to revive him. He soon opened his eyes and was not long in recovering when he saw his friend's charming face looking over him.

A few weeks later, when the tragedy at the opera compelled the intervention of the public prosecutor, M. Mitford, the commissary of police, examined the Vicomte de Chagny touching the events of the night at Perros. I quote the questions and answers as given in the official report pp. 150 et seq.:

Q. "Did Mlle. Dana not see you come down from your room by the curious road which you selected?"

A. "No, monsieur, no, although, when walking behind her, I took no pains to deaden the sound of my footsteps. In fact, I was anxious that she should turn round and see me. I realized that I had no excuse for following her and that this way of spying on her was unworthy of me. But she seemed not to hear me and acted exactly as though I were not there. She quietly left the quay and then suddenly walked quickly up the road. The church-clock had struck a quarter to twelve and I thought that this must have made her hurry, for she began almost to run and continued from the stairs on the left, they found hastening until she came to the church."

Q. "Was the gate open?"

A. "Yes, monsieur, and this surprised me, but did not seem to surprise Mlle. Dana."

Q. "Was there no one in the churchyard?"

A. "I did not see any one; and, if there had been, I must have seen him. The moon was shining on the snow and made the night quite light."

Q. "Was it possible for any one to hide behind the tombstones?"

A. "No, monsieur. They were quite small, poor tombstones, partly hidden under the snow, with their crosses just above the level of the ground. The only shadows were those of the crosses and ourselves. The church stood out quite brightly. I never saw so clear a night. It was very fine and very cold and one could see every thing."

ONE MILLION DOLLARS

FOR A GOOD STOMACH

This Offer Should Be a Warning to Every Man and Woman.

The newspapers and medical journals recently have had much to say relative to a famous millionaire's offer of a million dollars for a new stomach.

This great multi-millionaire was too busy to worry about the condition of his stomach. He allowed his dyspepsia to run from bad to worse until in the end it became incurable.

His misfortune serves as a warning to others.

Every one who has suffered with dyspepsia for a few years will give everything he owns for a new stomach.

Dyspepsia is commonly caused by an abnormal state of the gastric juices, or by lack of tone in the walls of the stomach. The result is that the stomach loses its power to digest food.

We are now able to supply certain missing elements—to help to restore to the gastric juices their digestive power, and to aid in making the stomach strong and well.

We know that Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets are a most dependable remedy for disordered stomachs, indigestion, and dyspepsia.

We want you to try them and will return your money if you are not more than satisfied with the result.

Three sizes, 25 cents, 50 cents, and $1.00. Remember, you can obtain Rexall Remedies in this community only at our store—The Rexall Store, The Smith Drug Co., 14 W. Milwaukee St., Janesville, Wis.

Q. "Was it possible for any one to hide behind the tombstones?"

A. "No, monsieur. They were quite small, poor tombstones, partly hidden under the snow, with their crosses just above the level of the ground. The only shadows were those of the crosses and ourselves. The church stood out quite brightly. I never saw so clear a night. It was very fine and very cold and one could see every thing."

SAVED HIS RASCALLY SON

How Mansard Came to Construct the Great Hall at Arles Without Central Pillar.

The great hall of the Hotel de Ville of Arles, France, designed by Mansard, is the wonder and admiration of every one who has seen it on account of the grained roof.

In regard to this a neighboring café tells a somewhat grim story. King Louis XIV. happened to be passing through the city just at the time Mansard was superintending the completion of his creation. The roof was supported by a powerful pillar. The monarch admired the work and congratulated the architect on his design. At that moment the architect was passing through great domestic tribulation. He had a son under sentence of death, so he thought it would be a good opportunity to intercede on behalf of the lad.

Mansard threw himself at the feet of the king and said: "Your majesty sees in the center that massive column? If you will spare the life of my son I will remove the unsightly pillar and the roof shall stand without support." "Mansard," replied the king, "if you accomplish that miracle I will pardon your son, but if you fail I will hang you with him."

The architect removed the pillar without great difficulty and with the result desired. The café is a philosopher and he concludes his story with the reflection that had not Mansard's son been a scamp the hall at Arles would be just like any other hall.

Asbestos Shingles. Asbestos shingles are now being manufactured in this country with success, and the trade has grown enormously. The new products are of the lightest weight and fireproof up to a temperature of two thousand and more degrees. They are proof against acids and weather and are said to last as long as a concrete building will.

WEAK, SICKLY, AILING WOMEN have little ambition, their own troubles occupy their thoughts. They are nervous, despondent, poor house makers and most wretched companions. Such women should try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. For nearly forty years it has been the standby of American womanhood of every age and condition. It cures all the "blues," which are all symptoms of one cause. It strengthens the proper nerves and muscles and thus corrects displacements.

Story of Mansfield. A belated story of Richard Mansfield is provided by an actor who was in his company at the time when the principal bill was Ibsen's "Peer Gynt." There were various elaborate dances in the production, and the dancing "enue" was given by the orchestra. On one occasion the stage manager forgot that the dancers were too far from the musicians to get or give cues. The expected happened. No music was forthcoming at one dancing cue. After a pregnant pause for the music, the actors ambled through the dance as best they could. The line following this dance came from the Doyre King's daughter. It was addressed to Mansfield: "How like you this dance?" "The music and dance are both utterly charming." This night his answer came promptly: "The music and dance are utterly charming—separately!"

Shopping Up to Date. "No, none of these hats suggest my personality at all. You see, I'm a great rascaller, adore drama, read classics in the original, sympathize with the woman's movement, travel a good deal, and am intensely temperamental. The hat I want must convey all this."

More Cranberry Dogs. Half a century ago the "cranberry industry" of Cape Cod consisted of the casual harvesting of an unimportant, unimproved native berry of very little importance either to the food supply or as an industry. Today the annual valuation of this crop, now consisting of over 300,000 barrels of superb improved berries is estimated at more than $2,000,000. Massachusetts lays claim to some 6,000 acres of cranberry bog. New Jersey has 8,000 and Wisconsin 6,000. In point of area these states are followed in turn by Rhode Island, Connecticut and New York.

SIDEWALK SKETCHES

DEMOSTHENES
By HOWARD L. RANN.

DEMOSTHENES was a Greek citizen with great powers of endurance and a record for plain and fancy oratory that has never been lowered on any track. It is said of Demosthenes that he could start flat-footed with a cold wind and orate until the janitor went home without hearing him.

His father was afflicted with a stutter which made it impossible for him to answer the telephone without having to pay for overtime, and Demosthenes inherited this infirmity, together with a pair of lungs which annoyed him considerably by collapsing at the psychological moment. Demosthenes overcame these defects by going out behind the barn and chinning himself on a horizontal bar, also by throwing parts of speech into the teeth of a head wind. This gave him a very durable and penetrating speaking voice, which enabled him to precipitate his vocabulary several miles in advance of his thought, a system which has since come into general use. No other equipment being required, he became a successful criminal lawyer, showing his fairness and impartiality by taking a retainer from both the plaintiff and the defendant. He made a specialty of personal injury cases, and had his passes called in by the railroads, but did not murmur or repine. Demosthenes is said to be the only lawyer on record who could fill the mind of a petit jury with anything but currents of air. Between terms of court Demosthenes picked up a little loose change by gyrating around the Chautauqua circuit and acting as guardian ad litem for people of feeble intellect. His death was very sudden, being the result of low spirits and a half pint of wood alcohol, which his relatives claimed was inhaled by mistake.

THE ESKIMOS It's queer, doggone it! They all have chilblains in their toes, and to the moving picture shows you never see the Eskimos with pleasure wending; they have no helpful looks to read, no "Sherlock Holmes," "Old Hunch" or "Queed," and there the nights are gone to seed—they have no ending. No photograph, no cards, no book! No folding bed, no lugenlock! Some gumdrops left by Dr. Cook their only solace! No luxuries to come their way, no pumpkin pie, no tales of lay! Oh, jumping slogs, never may their fate befalls us! And yet some Eskimos may cry "What chumps these folks who live and die beneath a tireless sunny sky, and seldom shiver! They're always short of snow down there, they never kill a polar bear, no whale is on their bill of fare, nor walrus liver!"

A Sure Sign.
"I know as soon as met Mr. Jones that he was a married man."
"Did he talk to you about his wife?"
"Never mentioned her."
"Then how did you know at once he was a married man?"
"He was such a good listener."

FORTY YEARS AGO

Janeville Gazette, Jan. 29, 1872.—Nearly eight hundred barrels of sugar were produced from the product of two hundred and fifty acres of beets, this year, by the manufactory at Black Hawk, Sauk county.

The Green Bay Advocate asserts that the Rock River Valley, between Lake Winnebago and Green Bay, with its continuous and immense waterfalls, is sure to become a great manufacturing locality in the west; and such a hive of industry, thirty miles in length, will give ample business to all the railroads which will be likely to be built along side of it.

The Galeville Journal says it is estimated that there will be 250,000,000 feet of logs placed in the river by Black River lumbermen.

The thermometer indicated 20 degrees below at seven o'clock this morning and 2 below at 2 p. m.

I wonder why the Eskimos persist in living in the snows, where every icy breeze that blows has white hairs on it? They have no coal or heating stoves, and so those poor misguided coves just stand around and freeze in droves.

THE ESKIMOS It's queer, doggone it! Prudent Man.
"You say he has money to burn."
"Yes, but there is nothing else he dreads so much as fire."

Rescued by Dogs of St. Bernard.
The dogs of St. Bernard recently rescued two women who were on their way to Milan and were overtaken by a storm. The women were overcome, and it seemed that death was certain. One of the dogs passing scented the travelers. He barked as only St. Bernard dogs can bark and this brought up his comrade, who was some distance away. The two dogs started on their search, found the women half buried in snow and then ran off to the hospice and the brothers were able to add two more names to their long list of rescues.

Yellow Journalism.
Grandpa often read aloud from the newspaper for mamma as she went about her work. One morning five-year-old Maxine brought a paper and sat down at his feet. Grandpa noticed that she, too, was pretending to read aloud. "A little girl ate a chicken alive and feathers grew out all over her back," was the startling bit of news he heard.—From the House-keeper.

Peculiarities of Tasso.
The South Sea Islanders gaze with disgust upon an American eating rare roast beef, but he will eat a fish raw, especially if he is an Hawaiian, with great relish. He also finds a dozen or more relatives of the oyster on the reef at low tide and thinks them highly appetizing. There is the devil fish, for instance. The squid is regarded as being a delicacy.
